

To Whomever This May Concerns,

Hello, my name is George Hill but I prefer to go by Jay. A little bit about me, I'm a junior Econ Major at SMU and I'm from Redding, Connecticut. My hobbies include playing tennis, cooking and exercising. I aspire to apply my empirical analysis skills and other methodologies I've acquired to a professional work setting; in possible roles such as but not exclusive to data analysis, consulting, marketing and more.

I aim to have a career where I can grow my judgment under uncertainty into a valuable asset. One of my strongest takeaways from college is that my pursuit of constant self improvement requires discipline but the motivation to stay disciplined is overwhelming without a structured and optimized routine. My strongest skill is my affability and a favorite quote of mine is from Mark Twain that states "keep away from people who belittle your ambition" This website gives a snap shot of some of the data analysis reports and essays I've completed as of recent.

Regards,

George J. Hill
